

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

[0038] In an embodiment, a pipelined processor may be adapted to process multi-cycle instructions (MCIs). Results generated in response to non-terminal sub-instructions may be written to a speculative commit register. When the MCI commits, i.e., a terminal sub-instruction reaches the WB stage, the value in the speculative commit register may be written to the architectural register.